

Paul Wysopal Special Agent in Charge
Federal Bureau of Investigation, Tampa
5525 West Gray Street
Tampa, FL 33609

Dear Special Agent Wysopal:

Today at 6:20 PM I received a telephone call from 813-253-1000 from a man who identified himself as the Tampa FBI. The caller did not provide his name. The caller asked to speak with Neil Gillespie, that's me. The caller asked "is this call being recorded" and I said yes. The caller was responding to the Telephone Recording Announcer informing him all calls are recorded for quality assurance purposes. The caller said it is against Florida law to record someone without the consent of both parties. I replied that the caller provided consent if he continued to talk. The caller responded "have a nice day, sir" and hung up. That's okay, the telephone is not compatible with certain disabilities of mine. I prefer email or written communication.

On information and belief, my long-standing practice of recording telephone calls on a land line is permitted. I am not a lawyer, and I did not attend law school. This is my understanding of the law as it applies to me. This does not constitute legal advice. If you have specific questions related to the information in this letter, you are encouraged to consult an attorney who can investigate the particular circumstances of your concern.

Florida Statutes, Chapter 934, Security of Communications; Surveillance, sometimes called the wiretapping statute, governs the unlawful interception and disclosure of wire, oral, or electronic communications. F.S. § 934.03. There is a significant difference between wiretapping and one or two party consent. Wiretapping is the covert monitoring or recording of telephone conversations by a third party government agency, such as by law enforcement with a court order.

In contrast, one or two party consent is essentially enhanced note-taking by private persons not affiliated with the government. From Wikipedia:

"Under the law of the United States and most state laws, there is nothing illegal about one of the parties to a telephone call recording the conversation, or giving permission for calls to be recorded or permitting their telephone line to be tapped. However the telephone recording laws in most U.S. states require only one party to be aware of the recording, while 12 states require both parties to be aware."

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Telephone\_tapping

Federal law permits one-party consent to record calls [18 USC § 2511]. One party consent is the law in 38 states. Twelve states, including Florida, require two party consent. On its face, two party consent is unconstitutional under the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution. The clause, which took effect in 1868, provides that no state shall deny to any person within its jurisdiction "the equal protection of the laws".

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Equal\_Protection\_Clause

Two party consent is also unconstitutional under the Supremacy Clause, the provision in Article Six, Clause 2 of the U.S. Constitution that establishes the U.S. Constitution, federal statutes, and U.S. treaties as "the supreme law of the land". It provides that these are the highest form of law in the U.S. legal system, and mandates that all state judges must follow federal law when a conflict arises between federal law and either the state constitution or state law of any state.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Supremacy\_Clause

I rely on the holding in Royal Health Care Servs., Inc. v. Jefferson-Pilot Life Ins. Co., 924 F.2d 215 (11th Cir. 1991). In my view Florida law prohibits "interception" of certain communication, but not all recording. The U.S. Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals has held that because only interceptions made through an "electronic, mechanical or other device" are illegal under Florida law, telephones used in the ordinary course of business to record conversations do not violate the law. In other words, the telephone set "intercepts" the call, not the recording device, and the phone call is lawfully recorded after lawful interception. This is in contrast to a court-ordered wiretap where a call is "intercepted" before it reaches the telephone set. The land-line home office telephone that I use lawfully intercepts a call before lawfully recording the call.

Please find enclosed a copy of Royal Health Care Servs., Inc. v. Jefferson-Pilot Life Ins. Co.

Also enclosed are pages 29 and 30 from Petition No. 12-7747 for writ of certiorari to the Supreme Court of the United States, Neil J. Gillespie v. Thirteenth Judicial Circuit Florida et al. My petition was denied February 19, 2013, rehearing denied April 15, 2013, see the docket, <http://www.supremecourt.gov/Search.aspx?FileName=/docketfiles/12-7747.htm>

Supreme Court review is discretionary. Less than 100 of the approximately 10,000 petitions per Term are granted review. Denial of review is not a judgment on the legal merits of a petition.

The foregoing is only a brief introduction to telephone recording law as it applies to me. Other documents and court filings are available upon request.

I also received the attached letter from Brian J. Nadeau referring me to the Tampa Field Office. I regret that my initial letter to the FBI March 5, 2014 was limited to public corruption. There is a lot more to consider, which I plan to submit shortly. Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Neil J. Gillespie
8092 SW 115th Loop
Ocala, Florida 34481

Telephone: 352-854-7807
Email: neilgillespie@mfi.net

attachments/enclosures

924 F.2d 215
(Cite as: 924 F.2d 215)

C

United States Court of Appeals,
Eleventh Circuit.
ROYAL HEALTH CARE SERVICES, INCORPORATED, d/b/a Best Care, Plaintiff-Appellant, v.
JEFFERSON-PILOT LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, Defendant-Appellee.
Nos. 90-5204, 90-5514.

Feb. 21, 1991.

Health care provider filed diversity suit against insurer pursuant to Florida Security of Communications Act for unauthorized recording of telephone conversation. The United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida, No. 88-959-CIV-SM, Stanley Marcus, J., granted insurer's motion for summary judgment. On appeal, the Court of Appeals held that "business extension" exception applied to telephone call so no "interception" occurred as defined in Act and insurer could not be held liable.

Affirmed.

West Headnotes

[1] Federal Courts 170B  433

170B Federal Courts

170BVI State Laws as Rules of Decision

170BVI(C) Application to Particular Matters

170Bk433 k. Other Particular Matters.

Most Cited Cases

In diversity suit pursuant to Florida Security of Communications Act, proper interpretation of Act was question of Florida law and federal court was therefore required to construe Act as would the Supreme Court of Florida. West's F.S.A. §§ 934.01-934.43.

[2] Telecommunications 372  1440

372 Telecommunications

372X Interception or Disclosure of Electronic Communications; Electronic Surveillance

372X(A) In General

372k1435 Acts Constituting Interception or Disclosure

372k1440 k. Persons Concerned; Consent. Most Cited Cases

(Formerly 372k494.1, 372k494)

To satisfy "business extension" or "extension phone" exception to Florida Security of Communications Act, communication must be intercepted by equipment furnished by provider of wire or electronic communication service in ordinary course of its business and call must be intercepted in ordinary course of business. West's F.S.A. § 934.02(4)(a).

[3] Telecommunications 372  1440

372 Telecommunications

372X Interception or Disclosure of Electronic Communications; Electronic Surveillance

372X(A) In General

372k1435 Acts Constituting Interception or Disclosure

372k1440 k. Persons Concerned; Consent. Most Cited Cases

(Formerly 372k494.1, 372k494)

For purposes of determining whether "business extension" exception to Florida Security of Communications Act was met in connection with unauthorized recording of telephone conversation, telephone extension, not tape recorder, intercepted call. West's F.S.A. § 934.02(4)(a).

[4] Telecommunications 372  1440

372 Telecommunications

372X Interception or Disclosure of Electronic Communications; Electronic Surveillance

372X(A) In General

372k1435 Acts Constituting Interception or Disclosure

372k1440 k. Persons Concerned; Con-

924 F.2d 215
(Cite as: 924 F.2d 215)

sent. Most Cited Cases

(Formerly 372k494.1, 372k494)

Telephone call by insurer's employee to employees of health care provider was intercepted in ordinary course of business, for purposes of determining applicability of "business extension" exception to Florida Security of Communications Act; entire call concerned charges by provider for services provided to insured patient. West's F.S.A. § 934.02\(4\)\(a\).

[5] Telecommunications 372 1440

372 Telecommunications

372X Interception or Disclosure of Electronic Communications; Electronic Surveillance

372X\(A\) In General

372k1435 Acts Constituting Interception or Disclosure

372k1440 k. Persons Concerned; Consent. Most Cited Cases

(Formerly 372k498)

Insurer was not liable under Florida Security of Communications Act for unauthorized tape recording of telephone conversation with health care provider's employees where "business extension" exception to Act applied, and thus no "interception" as defined by Act occurred. West's F.S.A. §§ 934.02\(3\), \(4\)\(a\), 934.10.

*215 Arnold R. Ginsberg, Perse & Ginsberg, Miami, Fla., for plaintiff-appellant.

Carol A. Fenello, Kimbrell & Hamman, Miami, Fla., for defendant-appellee.

Appeals from the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida.

Before COX and BIRCH, Circuit Judges, and GIBSON <sup>FN*</sup>, Senior Circuit Judge.

<sup>FN*</sup> Honorable Floyd R. Gibson, Senior U.S. Circuit Judge for the Eighth Circuit, sitting by designation.

PER CURIAM:

This is a diversity case in which plaintiff Royal Health Care Services, Inc. (Royal Health) sued defendant Jefferson-Pilot *216 Life Insurance Company (JP Life) pursuant to the Florida Security of Communications Act (the Act) <sup>FN1</sup> for the unauthorized recording of a telephone conversation. JP Life moved for summary judgment and the district court granted the motion. Royal Health appeals that determination.

<sup>FN1.</sup> Fla.Stat. Ann. §§ 934.01-934.43
(West Supp.1990).

I. FACTS

In September 1987 a JP Life employee who was in North Carolina called Royal Health's Miami, Florida office. The ensuing conversation was recorded pursuant to a JP Life policy that all outgoing calls from its case management department (which is responsible for ensuring that services to JP Life's insured are rendered in a cost-effective manner) be automatically recorded on a double-reeled tape recorder. The Royal Health employees who spoke with the JP Life employee were never told they were being recorded, and they never consented to such recording. JP Life's telephone system did, however, emit a periodic beep during the call. The call concerned a bill submitted to JP Life for a patient under the care of Royal Health.

II. PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Royal Health sued JP Life for unauthorized interception of an oral communication under section 934.10 of the Act. Royal Health sought compensatory and punitive damages. JP Life moved for summary judgment, contending that no interception took place. The district court granted JP Life's motion, holding that Royal Health had not established a genuine issue of material fact regarding an essential element of its case, that an interception took place.

924 F.2d 215
(Cite as: 924 F.2d 215)

III. CONTENTIONS AND ISSUE ON APPEAL

Royal Health argues that Florida law requires the consent of both parties to a telephone conversation before that conversation may be recorded and that because Royal Health's employees did not consent to being recorded, JP Life violated Florida law. Royal Health asserts that the Supreme Court of Florida's decision in State v. Tsavaris, 394 So.2d 418 (Fla.1981), controls the outcome of this case. JP Life asserts that because the business extension exception <sup>FN2</sup> applies to the phone call in question, no interception occurred under the Act, and therefore JP Life cannot be held liable.<sup>FN3</sup> We must decide if the district court was correct in its determination that no interception occurred in this case.

FN2. Fla.Stat. Ann. § 934.02(4)(a) (West Supp.1990).

FN3. JP Life makes other arguments we need not address because we will affirm on the issue of whether an interception took place under Florida law.

IV. DISCUSSION

Summary judgment is appropriate “if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.” Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(c). There are no disputed issues of material fact here. The only controversy concerns the proper application of Florida law to those facts.

[1] The proper interpretation of the Act is a question of Florida law. Therefore, federal courts are required to construe the Act as would the Supreme Court of Florida. Madara v. Hall, 916 F.2d 1510, 1514 (11th Cir.1990); Oriental Imports & Exports, Inc. v. Maduro and Curiel's Bank, N.V., 701 F.2d 889, 890-91 (11th Cir.1983). We begin with an examination of the statutory scheme, and then proceed to a review of the relevant case law.

[2] Royal Health alleges a claim under section 934.10 of the Act. That provision creates a civil remedy for “[a]ny person whose wire, oral, or electronic communication is intercepted ... in violation of [sections] 934.03-934.09.” Fla.Stat. Ann. § 934.10 (West Supp.1990). To be liable to Royal Health, therefore, JP Life must have intercepted the phone call. “Intercept” is *217 defined as “the aural or other acquisition of the contents of any wire, electronic, or oral communication through the use of any electronic, mechanical, or other device.” Fla.Stat. Ann. § 934.02(3) (West Supp.1990). To intercept a communication, then, an “electronic, mechanical or other device” must be used. “Electronic, mechanical, or other device” is defined as:

(4) ... any device or apparatus which can be used to intercept a wire, electronic, or oral communication other than:

(a) Any telephone or telegraph instrument, equipment or facility or any component there- of:

1. Furnished to the subscriber or user by a provider of wire or electronic communication service in the ordinary course of its business and being used by the subscriber or user in the ordinary course of its business or furnished by such subscriber or user for connection to the facilities of such service and used in the ordinary course of its business....

Fla.Stat. Ann. § 934.02(4)(a) (West Supp.1990) (emphasis added).

The exception to the definition of “electronic, mechanical, or other device” is commonly referred to as the business extension exception or the extension phone exception. Under the plain meaning of the statute, if this exception is met, then no interception occurred and there can be no liability under section 934.10. The exception has two prongs. First, the communication must be intercepted by equipment furnished by a provider of wire or electronic communication service in the ordinary course of its business. Second, the call must be intercepted in the ordinary course of business.

924 F.2d 215
(Cite as: 924 F.2d 215)

[3] Royal Health concedes that the telephone used by the JP Life employee was supplied by a provider of wire or electronic communication service (Southern Bell) in the ordinary course of its business.<sup>FN4</sup> Royal Health contends, however, that the interception was actually made by the tape recorder, not the telephone.<sup>FN5</sup> We disagree. We believe the telephone extension intercepted the call,<sup>FN6</sup> while the tape recorder recorded it. State v. Nova, 361 So.2d 411 (Fla.1978), supports our conclusion. There, the Supreme Court of Florida reviewed a case in which an employee's supervisor listened in to one of the employee's phone calls, but did not record the conversation. The court assumed that under the statute an interception could occur without the call being recorded and focused on the question of whether the call was made in the ordinary course of business. Id. at 413. Therefore, since a call need not be recorded to be intercepted, the phone extension must be the device that intercepts the call.<sup>FN7</sup> Federal case law interpreting the Federal Wiretap Act<sup>FN8</sup> lends further support to this conclusion. In Epps v. St. Mary's Hospital, Inc., 802 F.2d 412 (11th Cir.1986), our circuit rejected the precise argument Royal Health advances here. In Epps, a hospital employee recorded a phone call between Epps and another hospital employee. The call was received through a telephone console and recorded by a double-reeled tape recorder. The court decided that the console, not the recorder, intercepted the call. Id. at 415. See also United States v. Harpel, 493 F.2d 346, 350 (10th Cir.1974) (where phone call is recorded by attaching suction cup to telephone receiver and connecting it to a tape recorder, telephone receiver is intercepting device, not recorder).

FN4. See Appellant's Brief at 9.

FN5. Royal Health made this argument to the district court, but timidly pursues it on appeal. See Appellant's Brief at 26-27.

Nevertheless, we have a practice of reading briefs liberally to ascertain the issues on appeal, United States v. Milam, 855 F.2d 739 (11th Cir.1988), and we will therefore address the argument.

FN6. Our use of the term "intercepted" here is in accordance with its common meaning, not as it is defined by the Florida statute we are examining. We conclude later in this opinion that under the statute, no interception took place.

FN7. See also State v. Keaton, 371 So.2d 86, 91 n. 7 (Fla.1979) (in dicta, Supreme Court of Florida indicated prosecution could be based on testimony of a person not a party to a telephone conversation, if the complainant listened in in the ordinary course of business).

FN8. 18 U.S.C.A. §§ 2510-2521 (West Supp.1990).

*218 [4][5] Having concluded that the telephone extension intercepted the call in this case, we next decide whether the call in question was intercepted in the ordinary course of business. That determination is an easy one. The recording occurred pursuant to a standard JP Life policy; Royal Health does not dispute this. Nor does Royal Health contend the call was personal in nature. A review of the transcript of the call reveals that the entire call concerned charges by Royal Health for services provided to a patient insured by JP Life. The only conclusion that may be drawn is that the call was intercepted in the ordinary course of business.

We conclude, therefore, that both prongs of the business extension exception are satisfied and that the exception applies. No interception, as defined by the Act, occurred and the district court was correct in granting JP Life's motion for summary judgment.

Once again State v. Nova, 361 So.2d 411 (Fla.1978)

924 F.2d 215
(Cite as: 924 F.2d 215)

, supports our overall method of analysis. In that case, the court had to decide whether the trial court's determination that testimony of a murder victim's supervisor should not be suppressed was correct. The supervisor had listened in on a phone call that the victim received from the murderer while at work. The court proceeded exactly as we have in deciding whether an interception took place, first noting the definition of "intercept," then setting out the definition of "electronic, mechanical, or other device," and the business extension exception. The court then decided the call was intercepted in the ordinary course of business because the supervisor used the phone "for the benefit of her employer." Id. at 413. Therefore, the exception applied, no interception took place, and the trial court's decision not to suppress the testimony was vindicated.

Likewise, federal cases interpreting the Federal Wiretap Act have reached similar results. In Briggs v. American Air Filter Co., 630 F.2d 414 (5th Cir.1980),<sup>FN9</sup> a supervisor listened in on a telephone extension to an employee's phone conversation. The employee sued under the Federal Wiretap Act provision that corresponds to the provision in the Florida Act that Royal Health sued under. The court affirmed the district court's determination that summary judgment should be granted in favor of the defendants because the business extension exception to the federal act was applicable. The analysis employed was the same common-sense analysis we employ in this case, beginning with the statutory definitions of the key terms and proceeding to a discussion of the business extension exception. The court concluded that because the act of listening in was in the ordinary course of business, the exception applied, and no interception took place.

FN9. In Bonner v. City of Prichard, 661 F.2d 1206, 1209 (11th Cir.1981) (en banc), this court adopted as binding precedent all decisions of the former Fifth Circuit handed down prior to October 1, 1981.

Royal Health, of course, takes issue with the district court's conclusion that under Florida law no interception took place. Royal Health's brief almost completely ignores the applicability of the business extension exception and instead calls our attention to the Supreme Court of Florida's decision in State v. Tsavaris, 394 So.2d 418 (Fla.1981). Royal Health contends that Florida law evinces a strong interest in the protection of the privacy of telephone calls and that this interest is evidenced by Florida's two-party consent rule.<sup>FN10</sup> Royal Health further argues that because federal law contains a single-party consent rule,<sup>FN11</sup> federal case law is inapposite in analyzing the Florida statute at issue.

FN10. Assuming no exception applies, under Florida law both parties to a phone call must consent before that call may be recorded. Fla.Stat. Ann. § 934.03(2)(d) (West Supp.1990). See also Tsavaris, 394 So.2d at 422-23.

FN11. See 18 U.S.C.A. § 2511(2)(d) (West Supp.1990).

We are convinced that Tsavaris does not require a different result than the one we reach. We agree that Tsavaris says that the Florida statute "evinces a greater concern for the protection of one's privacy interests in a conversation than does the *219 [Federal Wiretap Act]." Tsavaris, 394 So.2d at 422. We also agree that Florida does indeed have a two-party consent rule. But we disagree with Royal Health's contention that all federal case law dealing with the Federal Wiretap Act is inapposite. The Historical Note that follows the legislative findings section of the Act <sup>FN12</sup> indicates that, "[w]ith one exception <sup>FN13</sup> the state law follows closely the federal act." In addition, the language of the Florida Act's business extension exception is identical to the language of the business extension exception in the federal Act.<sup>FN14</sup> Finally, were we to agree with Royal Health's contention that the call in question was intercepted because only one party consented to the recording, we would write the business extension exception out of the Florida Act. We see no reason to assume the Florida Legislature intended the exception to be meaningless when the plain language of the Act indicates otherwise.<sup>FN15</sup> For these reasons, we find Royal Health's arguments unconvincing.

924 F.2d 215
(Cite as: 924 F.2d 215)

FN12. Fla.Stat. Ann. § 934.01 (West 1985).

FN13. The exception noted is not relevant to our discussion.

FN14. See Horn v. State, 298 So.2d 194, 198 (Fla. 1st Dist.Ct.App.1974) (noting similarity of Florida Security of Communications Act and Federal Wiretap Act).

FN15. Cf. Briggs v. American Air Filter Co., 630 F.2d 414, 419 (5th Cir.1980) (“We do not believe Congress intended the exception to be superfluous, and therefore there must be some circumstances under which non-consensual interception falls within the ‘ordinary course of business’ exception.”).

V. CONCLUSION

We therefore AFFIRM the district court's grant of summary judgment in favor of defendant Jefferson-Pilot Life Insurance Company.<sup>FN16</sup>

FN16. Royal Health's appeal of the district court's summary judgment decision is assigned case number 90-5204 in this court. Royal Health also appeals the district court's award of costs to JP Life, and that appeal is assigned case number 90-5514. In its Motion to Consolidate, appellant acknowledges that an affirmance in case number 90-5204 should prompt an affirmance in case number 90-5514. The judgment of the district court awarding costs to JP Life is therefore affirmed.

AFFIRMED.

C.A.11 (Fla.),1991.
Royal Health Care Services, Inc. v. Jefferson-Pilot Life Ins. Co.
924 F.2d 215

END OF DOCUMENT

Telephone Recording

This petition challenges the constitutionality of Fla. Stat. 934.01 et seq., Security of Communications, and its requirement for two-party consent to record telephone calls, which conflicts with federal one-party consent in 18 USC § 2511, and the laws of most states.

Gillespie purchased a $15 Telephone Handset Recording Control from Radio Shack on December 20, 2005 to record phone calls from doctors treating his Mother who was hospitalized. It was a form of enhanced note-taking. On March 3, 2006 Gillespie partially recorded a phone call from Mr. Rodems, who argued with Gillespie, and misquoted him in an affidavit Rodems submitted to the court March 6, 2006. Mr. Rodems requested a bailiff be present at an upcoming hearing, alleging a threat of violent physical attack in Judge Nielsen's chambers. A subsequent investigation by Tampa Police lawyer Kirby Rainesburger concluded February 22, 2010:

I'm not suggesting that Mr. Rodems was right or accurate in representing to the court as an "exact quote" language that clearly was not an exact quote. I'm only concluding that his misrepresentation does not, in my judgment, rise to the level of criminal perjury. No further action is contemplated by this agency at this time.

Gillespie realized the need to record any future calls from Mr. Rodems to avoid a repeat of this problem, and found online and purchased a DynaMetric Call Saver kit that recorded and saved telephone phone calls to .wav files rather than clunky cassette tapes. He also installed a voice announcer: "This call is being recorded for quality assurance purposes". Gillespie relied on the holding of Royal Health Care Servs., Inc. v. Jefferson-Pilot Life Ins. Co.

On July 25, 2012 attorney Eugene P. Castagliuolo accused Gillespie of wrongfully recording a phone call June 14, 2011 where he admitted to mental problems. Mr. Castagliuolo threatened to sue Gillespie under chapter 934 Fla. Stat., and also threatened Michael Borseth, a court reporter who made the transcript. Gillespie reported Mr. Castagliuolo's threat to Florida

Attorney General Pam Bondi by letter August 1, 2012. Mr. Castagliuolo has been threatening Gillespie for the past year over a number of issues related to his representation of Gillespie at Mr. Rodems' deposition. Gillespie's letter to the Attorney General stated on page 2, in part:

I believe Mr. Castagliuolo is misinformed about Chapter 934, Florida Statutes as interpreted by Royal Health Care Servs., Inc., 924 F.2d 215 (11th Cir. 1991). In my personal opinion Florida law prohibits the "interception" of certain communications, not all recording. The U.S. Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals has held that because only interceptions made through an "electronic, mechanical or other device" are illegal under Florida law, telephones used in the ordinary course of business to record conversations do not violate the law. In other words, the telephone set "intercepts" the call, not the recording device, and the phone call is lawfully recorded after lawful interception. This is in contrast to a court-ordered wiretap where a call is "intercepted" before it reaches the telephone set. A land-line home office telephone, really any land-line home phone, is the type that intercepts a call before it is recorded.

On August 10, 2012 Gillespie received an email response from Samantha Santana of the Florida Attorney General's Office. Ms. Santana wrote in part:

It appears that you provided a copy of your complaint about Attorney Eugene Castagliuolo to The Florida Bar, which is the appropriate agency to address this matter. Please follow up with The Bar directly for further assistance.

Gillespie submitted a Bar complaint the next day, August 11, 2012.

Notice of Telephone Recording

Gillespie provided notice<sup>1</sup> in Gillespie v. Barker, Rodems & Cook, 05-CA-7205, Plaintiff's Notice of Telephone Recording, December 30, 2009: (after Mr. Bauer's withdrawal)

All calls on plaintiff's home office business telephone extension are recorded for quality assurance purposes pursuant to the business use exemption of Florida Statutes chapter 934, section 934.02(4)(a)(1) and the holding of Royal Health Care Servs., Inc. v. Jefferson-Pilot Life Ins. Co., 924 F.2d 215 (11th Cir. 1991).

---

<sup>1</sup> Notice of Mr. Rodems' Written Consent to Record, December 29, 2006.

The Florida Bar, by certified letter to Paul Hill, General Counsel, October 30, 2008.

The Tampa Police Department, during Mr. Rainesburger's investigation of Mr. Rodems.

Gainesville Florida Police Dept./City Attorney Thomas B. Arden, by letter November 4, 2011.

The Florida Attorney General, by letter August 1, 2012, and perhaps at other times.

U.S. Department of Justice

Federal Bureau of Investigation

Washington, D.C. 20535-0001

April 11, 2014

Neil J. Gillespie
8092 SW 115th Loop
Ocala, FL 34481

Dear Mr. Gillespie:

Your recent communication to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Public Corruption Unit (PCU), has been received.

The primary function of FBI Headquarters is the administration of program management, policy formulation, training and other administrative duties. The review of complaint letters involving potential public corruption and related allegations is the responsibility of the appropriate FBI field office.

Accordingly, the PCU has forwarded your complaint information to the appropriate local FBI Field Office. Should you wish to provide any additional information related to this matter, please furnish the specific details directly to the below address.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Brian J. Nadeau", is positioned above the typed name.

Brian J. Nadeau
Unit Chief
Public Corruption Unit

Cc/Enc:
FBI Tampa
5525 West Gray Street
Tampa, FL 33609